ENGAGE REUNION PLANNERS

Reach reunion planners online @ www.reunionsmag.com

Millions look forward to the joy of reuniting every year — even more so after a pandemic interruption. Now reunion planners are eager to return to the task of making their reunions happen. Hugs can only happen in person ... not online!

The focus of Reunions magazine and its related social media sites is reunion planning. Our audience is reunion planners, who make the plans and purchasing decisions for memorable events for their families, school, military and other groups.

Jenkins Scott Family Reunion

Reunion planners rely on the knowledge, skill and expertise of professionals to help answer questions, solve dilemmas and make decisions and plans. Reunion planners turn to specialists who have far greater knowledge at their fingertips. They are looking for answers to questions they've not even thought to ask. They know they can't do it all without help and they're eager to connect with experts at convention and visitors or tourism bureaus, hotels, resorts, cruises, airlines, ranches, bed and breakfasts, airbnbs, and inns. They also need the services of t-shirt suppliers, memento makers, caterers, photographers, florists, motor coaches, attractions, entertainment and ... and ... and ...

Planning a reunion is a labor of love and deserves a lot of support and help to achieve. If you/your business can be of service, you'll want your message where planners are already looking for help, ideas and inspiration on the virtual pages of Reunions magazine and its website. Add your message of assistance, knowledge and encouragement just when/where the planner needs to encounter it.

Consider many of the ways to reach reunion planners through digital advertising.
